All Sorts and Sizes of Chatty Paragraphs on Many Themes—Easily Read and Not Soon Forgotten.

The Brunswick (Ga.) Times has this: The Western and Atlantic train left the track last night at Melrose, and Richard McAlister, fireman, was killed.

That was the message, almost buried in its brevity, that was flashed over the wires from Atlanta to the Times last Friday night. He was only a fireman, of small consequence to this matter-of-fact world, with its rush and bustle, and so a three-line paragraph in the morning papers was his obituary.

But back of this bare notice of McAlister's death is one of the most pathetic stories in the history of railroad accidents in Georgia. The dead man had a mother and family who lived in the valley of the famous Chickamauga, and about them the pathos of the story. But let Engineer Adamson, who stood weeping over the body of his friend, tell it:

"He was a good boy," he said, "one of the best hearted men I have ever known, and he loved his family so. Every night when he would run by his home his mother would put out a light to let him know that all was well, and he would answer with a light. Last night she may have watched all night, for he didn't pass, and no doubt she was troubled with the thought that something was wrong."

And something was wrong. While the faithful mother, with her lamp of love aflame, was straining her eyes through the darkness of the night to catch a gleam of the flashing headlights that announced "Al" was back with her son, that son was stark in death.

The eyes that had watched for the light in the window that told of the safety of mother and kindred were strained through the dusk of the valley for the red ray which conveyed to him a message of love from home.

Richard was dead by the track! But the rush and roar of the engine, and the flashing of the headlights through the swirl reaches of the valley never came.

The minutes ticked slowly by, and the loving mother, eyes of her? Through the dark watches she waited at the window, in her hand the beacon that assured Richard of the well being of the jewels of his heart.

But the rush and roar of the engine, and the flashing of the headlights through the swirl reaches of the valley never came.

tearful was very audible to the congregation of the friends of the lady, who were gathered when at that moment the engineer began the service by reading the sentence, "Read your heart and not your garments."

A gentleman, unknown in the United States was heartily enjoyed a short time ago on Mr. Schepd's green, at Danville, N. J. About ten years ago, while abroad, Mr. Schepd was invited by an English gentleman to take part in a game of cards on a green near Liverpool. Mr. Schepd was so pleased with the game that after reaching home he built a green and procured bowls from Scotland, and invited a few of his friends to share with him the pleasures of the game.

The whaling schooner Eira, the only vessel engaged in the pursuit of the hvalfinns of the deep from New London, Conn., at the present time, arrived there last week from Cumberland Head, Hudson Bay, with 4,000 pounds of bone and 250 barrels of oil as her cargo.

A pet kitten was found dead at Howland, Ore., and examination showed that it was dead from the effects of a violent motion in an effort to free itself. It is supposed the kitten caught the little saucer, in its effort to escape made a dart down the kitten's throat, but that being too small for it the strangling of both kitten and lizard resulted.

A "lateral" fish was recently caught in the Connecticut River, although its proper home is in the deep sea. Its peculiarity is its transparency; by holding it up to the light every bone can be easily counted. It has a reddish tinge, and this one was about seven inches long, although they have been caught in drag nets off the coast that were eighteen inches long.

Pickings from the Current "Pack." I passed my arm around her waist, and drew her to my side. Clinging close in eager haste, she cried: "Well, that's just the way I feel."

How to get ahead of your own shadow—Face the light. "John," asked the Sunday-school teacher of the new scholar, "what do you know of the proverb regarding people who live in glass houses?"

"They are bound to be seen," replied the scholar. "That's all right," said the teacher. "But the great size of the 'I' to the tariff question is shown by the extra 'I'."

The purring qualities of charcoal are hardly illustrated by the language of a man who absently picks up and chews the burnt end of a match in mistake for a clove.

What a peculiar gait the President has! "Yes: sort of family carriage."

Husband—How were prices in market today? Wife—Same as usual. Some things a cent lower, and other things ten cents higher.

"How much will it cost me to go to the races?" "How much have you got?" "About seventy-five dollars."

All told, the summer doctors reported in eight weeks 165 cases of poverty and suffering from lack of the bare necessities of life, and the record was made by the committee alone paid 1,238 visits, carrying provisions and nearly a thousand articles of clothing, of which there was urgent need.

wild animals prowling about, and besides, it's dangerous. Don't snap a gun unless you are positive it is empty. Don't lose your temper in a friendly competition.

Don't blame the gun for something when you shoot badly. The chance is that the fault is with yourself. Don't give up the match until the last shot is fired.

Don't knock down the muzzle of your loaded pistol; it might be cocked. Don't overload your gun; you may spoil it and damage yourself as well.

Don't put your gun away dirty. To shoot with it must be kept clean. Don't have an excuse for every defeat. Own up, and do better next time.

Don't get discouraged if you happen to make a poor score, and say you will give up shooting. Don't forget that practice makes perfect, and that it is within the province of every man to at least become a fair shot.

Don't carry a revolver until you have had proper instructions how to use it. Don't borrow your friend's rifle and shoot him dirty or rusty; it is not sporting.

Don't point a revolver or any other firearm at your toes. You might lose one or two of your pedal extremities. Don't buy firearms because they are cheap. They might prove very expensive.

Don't get it into your head that you are the only man who knows how to shoot. Credit others with a little knowledge. Don't touch the trigger until you are ready to shoot.

Don't pull a gun over a fence, out of a boat or a wagon, with the muzzle toward you. Don't carry your gun so that the muzzle points in the direction of anyone.

There are always chances for the enemy's discharge of your weapons. Don't forget your ammunition when you go shooting. Don't annoy an opponent when shooting a match. It is neither fair nor gentlemanly.

Don't change the sights of your rifle for every bad shot. The sight represents but one factor of many to be considered. Don't get within range of an inexperienced person when he is handling a loaded weapon.

Don't forget that a dirty gun will not shoot true. Don't all too look through your gun before loading it. It might have an obstruction in it.

Don't discourage your boy if he wants to go off for a day's shooting. Many boys are fond of sports. Go with him and give him all the "polish" you can. Don't forget that the danger lies in ignorance and carelessness.

Helene Mora. Helene Mora, the famous female baritone, has lost none of her charm. She has visited Washington several seasons with Hyde's refined company, now playing at Kerner's, only to meet with complete success on each and every appearance. Her wonderful voice is becoming more and more appreciated. She has convinced Washington that she has not only a true baritone voice, but a voice that the vocalists have made highly acceptable. Washington a season or two ago may have mistaken Helene Mora for a woman with simply a phenomenal voice that could place her in the ranks of the vocal wonders of the stage. To-day Washington recognizes in Helene Mora not only the greatest female baritone, but an artist whose musical education has been complete and whose accomplishments and refinement make her voice priceless. With new songs, which but test her wonderful voice, Helene Mora is as fresh to-day as she was two seasons ago, and certainly ten times more popular.

A PERMANENT EVIL.

THE BRITISH.

Don't Will Seriously Injure This Country—A Movement to Pay Members of Parliament—Other Foreigners News of Interest.

London, Oct. 29.—The President of the Chamber of Commerce at Bradford delivered a stirring address yesterday on the McKinley bill, his speech being based on grounds similar to those assumed by Mr. Gladstone in his speech at Dundee. The Bradford speaker was in a jubilant frame of mind over the effects of the bill, which he assured his hearers, would work only temporary evil in England, but in America the evil would be permanent.

Mr. Charles Fenwick, the Gladstonian member of Parliament for the Wansbeck division of Northumberland, has prepared a bill which he will introduce in the House of Commons as early as possible after the reassembling of Parliament, providing for the payment to members of the House of an annual salary of £200. A bill of this kind has been often suggested but never hitherto looked upon with any great degree of favor by Commons, for various reasons, chief among them being the hands of the quiescent representative of the former opponents of the proposition, and Mr. Fenwick is not likely that the sum proposed as annual compensation may be increased in spite of the gratification which is payment would afford the Home Rule members.

The grand struggle between the dockers and the shipowners is likely to begin in Liverpool, instead of London, the Liverpool Shippers' Association having resolved to discharge non-union hands in the docks of the city. Advice from Melbourne represents the situation as having undergone little change. The Employers' Union there has received still to the amount of £20,000 from London merchants interested in the Australian trade, and the strikers have received from the London unions a sum aggregating a little more than one-third of that amount. In New Zealand the strike is still in progress, with little change in its aspect. A number of laborers have been prosecuted and fined for breaking their contracts in leaving their work without giving proper notice.

The police are now in possession of information showing almost conclusively that Mrs. Pierce was assisted in the murder of Mrs. Hobbs by a female accomplice. The report that it has been made a confession to the police has not yet been verified and by many persons it is not credited, but it is certain that it has imparted information the value of which has been tested by the good results which have followed action upon it. The identity of the woman who aided the Pierce woman in the commission of the crime is known, but her present place of concealment is as yet unknown.

Professor Koch of Berlin has perfected his plan for the cure of consumption by inoculation, which he submitted to the recent session of Congress, and invites expert examination of its merits. The mode of treatment is said to have received the unqualified approval of many of the leading German physicians who until very recently scouted the idea.

The proposition to tax the titles is receiving unexpected support in the French Chamber of Deputies, owing to the recent revelations and the general indignation against the nobles implicated in the conspiracy.
